A MOVEMENT OF WOMEN ON MISSION SINCE 1874

Formerly WMUV

It's Official – We're Now HerMission!

We're writing to share an important update: after a season of prayer, research, listening, and discernment—culminating in a board vote and a community-wide vote of 104 to 63—WMUV is now HerMission.

While our name has changed, our mission has not. We remain deeply committed to empowering the entire church to live out their calling: to serve boldly and share Christ's love in every area of life. HerMission reflects both who we are today and the path we believe God is leading us on—while honoring the faithful legacy we continue to build upon.

We recognize that change can be difficult, and we're grateful for the grace, prayers, and trust you've extended throughout this process. To honor our legacy and help ease the transition, we'll be answering the phone as HerMission of WMUV.

Thank you for walking with us. We're excited for what's ahead—together, on mission.

DISASTER RELIEF

When a disaster strikes a community, we all want to do something. But during a disaster, how you help is as important as being willing to help. With our training, partnerships, and experience behind you, you and your church can help people facing all the challenges brought by a storm.

SERVING

Work continues in Southwest Virginia restoring homes damaged by flooding from Hurricane Helene last fall and recent storms in February. There is much work left to do, and we need YOU to help complete it. While we need volunteers with construction expertise, your whole team does not need experience in order to serve. There are also opportunities for volunteers to serve at the host sites ensuring meals are prepared and volunteer needs are met. The only cost for volunteers is travel to and from the sites. Volunteers sleep in host churches on their own air mattresses or cots; meals and all building materials are provided on site through the generosity of many donors.

Together, we can help restore these communities to wholeness and share a tangible example of God's love for them as we work. We are currently scheduling teams through August 2. Register your preferred week(s) at our Disaster Volunteer Registration Page. If you have any questions, please contact Kristen Curtis at Kristen.curtis@bgav.org.

TRAINING

Impact Disaster Response will provide meals for campers and local volunteers for Impact Mission Camps this summer. This will be a great training exercise to help ensure volunteers and equipment are in good working order before the most active part of hurricane season. Last year, Impact Disaster Response was called on to provide meals after Hurricane Helene, and the work in the summer helped ensure we were prepared to serve.

JUDGEMENT HOUSE

Judgement House is an 8-scene, walk-through drama that presents the gospel through a relevant and gripping story. Guests are led through the drama by a guide where they hear a story about people whose lives have been cut short as a result of their choices and a tragedy. You will see what happens beyond the grave to those who accepted Christ and to those who reject him.

This is not Christian entertainment; it is a unique tool that shares the gospel message and is perfect for believers as a place to bring their unchurched friends and family. The Judgement House experience takes approximately 1 hour, and groups of 15-20 people are launched every 15 minutes.
